

Legal technology company gains national civil litigation docket program

Challenge

A case management software company was building a new product to offer to law firms and corporate counsel. The product, a national civil litigation docket program, needed the collaborative efforts of attorneys and technologists. The software company, however, did not have in-house legal expertise. To finish the product cost-effectively and in time, the company brought on board LegalEase attorneys to work with their tech team.

Solution

LegalEase carried out extensive research and set up a process to create the national civil litigation docket program. The research involved thorough understanding of procedural court deadlines, local rules, and tracking of court holidays. The product that LegalEase built helps calculate state deadlines based on the rules of procedure for each court. Our team also proactively offered tech-enabled solutions to track court rule updates.

Results

- A complete product that the client will offer to law firms and corporate counsel.
- Continued utilization of processes developed during the project lifecycle.
- Future extension of program across all states of the United States.
- 60% cost savings by using LegalEase instead of an inhouse team.

“LegalEase carried out extensive research, set up a process to create the national civil litigation docket program, and proactively offered tech-enabled solutions to track court rule updates.”

1 groundbreaking legal product

30 days turnaround time

60% cost savings